

DRI-PACK® Chilling System.

Benefits

- Instant chilling.
- Precision placement of CO₂ snow into open boxes.
- Hood adjusts to varying box sizes and heights.
- Adapts to existing conveyor lines.
- Simple controls.
- Produces precisely the amount of snow needed.

Linde's Dri-Pack® chilling system is the solution for processors who need instant chilling of perishables directly in their packing boxes.

Designed and built to meet USDA requirements, the Dri-Pack® system consists of two patented Model LVSH-7 snow horns, exhaust shroud, box adapter, control panel, hydraulic controls, and a frame which fits around existing conveying lines.

Utilizing the LNSH-7 snow horn's low velocity design assures precision placement of CO₂ snow without costly CO₂ loss due to snow blowout and losses associated with conventional box snow applicators. Built for total flexibility, the Dri-Pack® system has simple controls which produce precisely the amount of snow needed and safely exhaust CO₂ vapor.

The system can be controlled either automatically or manually on conveyorized packing lines. An adjustable hydraulic lifting mechanism raises and lowers the hood to a predetermined height, allowing packing boxes to move smoothly through the packing process.

Linde's Dri-Pack® system can accommodate interchangeable box adapters in three size ranges, allowing a customer to use the same machine on varying box sizes and heights.
